MOB LAW SUPREME.

Juries and Courts No Use in New Orleans.

SLAUGHTER OF ITALIAN PRISONERS.

Eleven of Them Bludgeoned and Riddled, and Three of them Later Hanged—An Outbreak That Uncle Sam May Have to Pay For—Fellow Countrymen of the Dead Men, at Home and Abroad, Demanding Reparation—The Italian Government Sends in a Vigorous Protest, and Secretary Blaine Telegraphs as Vigorously to Gov. Nichols.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 16.—Thirty-four years ago a political mob murdered a dozen or more Italians who were thought to have obtained too much influence in the politics of this city, and Saturday eleven more of the same nationality were slaughtered by a mob lead by the "best citizens" because a duly authorized court and a jury selected with the greatest care did not find them guilty of the murder of Chief of Police Hennessey. The intention of the leaders of the movement to resort to mob law was announced boldly the night before; the preparations for the slaughter were made with deliberation; but notwithstanding this there was practically no attempt to prevent the mob from working its will. The mayor never gets to his office much before noon, and although he must have known the temper of the people and the danger of an uprising, he didn't hurry himself. In fact, the work was made as easy for the mob as it was possible without the officials bringing the prisoners out and delivering them up to death.

Leaders of the Mob.
J. C. Wickliffe and W. S. Parkerson, both prominent citizens, were the immediate leaders of the mob. The call for its meeting was issued the night before, and to said call the names of sixty-one citizens were appended—men in business, professional men, and all prominent in some walk of life. The mob collected around the statue of Heary Clay, where Parkerson made an address in which he called upon the citizens to avenge the death of Hennessey, and told them to bring their guns. This was about 10 o'clock a.m., and shortly thereafter the mob was on its way to the jail, many of its members having taken Parkerson's advice and armed themselves with shotguns and Winchesters.

Little Trouble at the Jail.
When the jail was reached there was little trouble. There was no one there to uphold the majesty of the law. The gates were broken in speedily, and those with guns were admitted. The only effort to save the lives of the prisoners was the sending of them all to the woman's department, which was quickly invaded, and the wretched men shot down or bludgeoned mercilessly. Three of the prisoners had been ordered acquitted by Judge Nichols, and the other two were spared, but the others to the number of eleven met the fate of death.

Amusement for Those Outside.
Those of the mob who had been admitted to the jail clamored to have a hand in the fun, and Politz, the prisoner who went crazy during the trial, was first shot and then dragged to the outer gate, where he was delivered to the mob, who fastened a rope around his neck and hauled his yet living body up to a lamp post, where, as it hung it was filled with bullets. Two others were treated in the same way, while the crowd yelled with delight. When the bloody work was done Parkerson asked the mob to disperse, and they did so, first carrying him in triumph on their shoulders for some distance up the street. One of the men lynched was quite a wealthy merchant—Macheco—and his connection with the murder of Hennessey was that he owned the house where the conspirators are said to have met the night of the murder.

Names of the Victims.
The names of the men who suffered death are as follows: Gerachi, Romero, Monastero, Carruso, Cometez, Trabina, Macheco, Scaffetti, old man Marchesi, Politz, and Bagnetto. They were absolutely defenseless, and their screams of terror were appalling when their slayers entered the room, which was soon converted into a slaughtering pen. A dozen reports rang out, the victims were pointed out to those who were detailed to do the killing, and in some cases the bodies were riddled with bullets. Three or four of the men were knocked in the head before being shot. Romero was shot to death as he knelt praying for mercy.

Vengeance Sated and Order Restored.
Half an hour after the events above recorded the mob had dispersed and order was restored. Around the jail a curious crowd of thousands was gathered, while at the newspaper offices other thousands stood around the bulletin boards waiting for the latest news. Nowhere was there a word of condemnation for the lawless work. Every one approved it, and the only thing that seemed to be regretted was that O'Malley, a detective who had been active in gathering evidence in favor of the prisoners, and who was Hennessey's mortal enemy, had not also been killed. But he had disappeared, and could not be found, or he probably would have made the twelfth victim.

A Reflection of Public Opinion.
The Times Democrat reflects public opinion in the following editorial: "This paralysis of justice was due neither to the incompetency of the police nor to the incapacity of the officials appointed to administer the laws; it was due to the settlement in New Orleans of lawless bands of men hailing mostly from southern Italy, who brought with them to this country of freedom and of free institutions the pernicious ideas and murderous methods which have planted conspiracy and assassination societies in their quagmire home, and which enable the members of those societies to defy detection and laugh justice to scorn. The short, sharp, and decisive drama of yesterday had in it, moreover, a warning for another class, which it will do well not to disregard. We refer to the jury-fixers, who are experts in getting at tomesmen and jurymen, and in filling the jury box, partially or wholly, with men pledged to consult, above all things, the interests of the criminals and to see that the convictions shall not be arrived at by juries against them."

The Sort of Reparation Possible.
Just what further steps, if any, will be taken by the president beyond the mere disapproval of mob violence, as evidenced by the tone of Secretary Blaine's dispatch to Governor Nichols, cannot be yet ascertained. Among congressmen and diplomats who have given such matters some attention, it is thought that the only reparation that can be obtained is, possibly, damages by the wives or relatives of the dead Italian subjects from the municipal government of New Orleans for not protecting the persons of individuals—who, at the time they met their death, were temporarily at least in the custody of the municipal authorities of that city.

Indignation Among Italians.
A Profound Sensation in Rome—Americans in Danger of Mob Law.
LONDON, March 16.—A dispatch from Rome says that the news of the massacre of Italian prisoners in New Orleans did not become generally known in that city until yesterday morning. It created a profound sensation, and cables have been passing between the cabinet and the Italian minister at Washington City. The general feeling is one of the utmost indignation and thirst for reprisals in some form. An English visitor who was mistaken for an American and a narrow escape from being mobbed. It is expected that the subject will be brought up in the chamber of deputies.

Will Keep Italy Away From the Fair.
Count Rasoni, of the Italian legation in Paris, expressed himself in very strong terms on what he called the cruel massacre of his countrymen. He said Italy could not afford to let such an outrage on humanity go without redress, and that it was a stain on the American people that could never be effaced. He added, that in his own personal opinion, it ended all prospects of Italy taking part in the Chicago exhibition. He also said that he had no doubt that if the men had been guilty they would have been convicted, as the jury would not have dared to acquit them.

Instructions to Baron De Fava.
The Italian cabinet has instructed by cable the Italian minister at Washington City, Baron De Fava, to protest vehemently against the murder of Italians in the prison at New Orleans. Baron Fava has cabled in reply that he had presented the protest to the government of the United States, and received in reply the promise that full satisfaction would be given.

Banquet Described at Chicago.
CHICAGO, March 16.—The effect of the news from New Orleans in this city among the Italian residents was to create intense indignation. A banquet had been prepared at the Palace hotel and viands were waiting the diners when the news came. The banquet was in honor of the fourteenth anniversary of the birth of King Humbert, but it was not held. Instead an indignation meeting was convened, and a telegram sent to Rome invoking the energetic action of the Italian government on the matter. The speeches were strongly worded and loudly applauded. A mass-meeting was held yesterday of Italian residents here and 2,000 were present. Addresses were made by prominent men of that nationality. A dispatch was sent to Secretary Blaine asking the impossible—that the federal government should punish the New Orleans mob leaders. During one of the speakers, said that if reparation was not given he would tear up his naturalization papers. Resolutions were adopted protesting against the outrage, and appealing to both governments to see that it was punished.

Denies the Existence of Mafia.
Oscar Durant, editor of L'Italia, said to an interviewer Saturday: "The statement that there is a secret society, the Mafia, organized to commit murder, among my countrymen is a lie. I believe I represent the feeling of the majority of my countrymen in Chicago and the nation when I denounce the published statements about the Mafia as false through-out."

Italian Colonies Everywhere in the United States.
The Italian colonies are expressing their indignation, and at New York the Italian newspapers received telegrams from Detroit, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Denver, Boston, Cincinnati, this city and elsewhere denouncing the work of the mob.

An Angry Italian Editor.
NEW YORK, March 16.—Italians resident in this city are in a ferment of anger over the news from New Orleans. Telegrams were sent to the Italian minister at Washington City demanding that he take prompt steps in the matter. L'Eco d'Italia, a representative Italian newspaper, winds up an editorial as follows: "If the massacre that we have witnessed in this free republic is allowed to go unpunished we will denounce it as assassination. Our word is quickly pledged. We never repent. Vendo."

Implied Threat of a Vice Consul.
KANSAS CITY, March 16.—Jerome Fedili, Italian vice consul here, said yesterday: "The lynching in New Orleans will cause trouble, I am afraid, between Italy and this government. Do the people of America think the indiscriminate killing of our people, adjudged innocent by an American jury right? What would they think of the bombardment of a defenseless town by our navy, which, you will admit, is in good condition." The city market here is run by Italians and they are feverish with excitement.

MIGHTY CARELESS ABOUT GUESTS.
A Man Dies in an Albany, N. Y., Hotel, and Lays Two Weeks Unattended.
ALBANY, N. Y., March 16.—A horrible discovery was made at the Dunlap house Saturday, a man being found dead after having laid for some days. On Feb. 26 a man called at the hotel and registering himself as Robert W. Davis, of Kearns, paid for a room and was assigned to one on the third floor. He went to his room and from that time on the hotel people seem to have lost all interest in his movements. He was not seen again, nor does it appear that there was any inquiry as to whether his room was tenanted or not until Saturday, when a horrible stench penetrating through the hall way attracted attention and indicated that something was wrong in the room.

Found a Decomposed Body.
The door was found to be locked, and on its being burst open Davis' body was discovered upon the bed badly decomposed. He had evidently been dead from the night he took the room and retired two weeks ago. The deceased was apparently 50 years old, and from letters found in his pocket it was inferred that he came down from Kearns to meet a daughter who lives in Oneida county. It is probable that he blew out the gas and was asphyxiated.

That White Slavery Exists.
POCAHONTAS, Va., March 16.—John Herse, the Bohemian correspondent who went to investigate the alleged ill treatment of Hungarians on the Elk Horn extension in West Virginia, arrived here Friday. Herse says that after a careful investigation he found the report to be substantially correct. The men are whipped when they attempt to leave, are poorly fed and as badly housed, and kept in debt to their employers by ways that are dark. Herse secured their release, and they are now on their way here, where they will be cared for and sent wherever they desire to go.

A Sky-Scraper Viaduct.
WASHINGTON CITY, March 16.—The Bureau of American Republics says that the highest viaduct in the world has just been erected in Bolivia over the river Lea for the Antofagasta railroad, 8,833 feet above the sea. The length of the viaduct is 19,497 feet. It's height above the river is 4,088 feet. The highest pillar is 3,736 feet, and the weight is 9,115 tons.

Scenes at the Bombardment of Pisagua by the Revolutionary Fleet—Fleeing Women and Children Moved Down by Scores with Grape—One More Story on Parnell, Which He Denies, Together with the Mrs. O'Shea Report—Death of the Pope's Leader in Germany.

SANTIAGO, Chili, March 16.—The bombardment of Pisagua by the revolutionary fleet will stand in history as one of the most terrible ever suffered by a seaport. The commandant of Pisagua received an officer of the insurgent's cruiser Esmeralda early in the morning with a flag of truce, but refused his demand for surrender under threat of bombardment. The Esmeralda was then joined by the Blanco, and at 10 a. m. a terrible bombardment began, the two cruisers keeping up an almost ceaseless fire for almost six hours. The Blanco's fire was mostly grape and did terrible execution. A perfect shower of shot and shell fell upon the town. On every side men and women were running wildly about. Men trampled over women and children in their mad endeavors to seek safety in the upper part of town. Little children ran about crying for their mothers and more than one was felled to the ground by the bursting grenades.

The Very Dead Riddled with Shot.
Women seeking a place of safety were seen to throw up their hands, stagger, and fall dead. Dead bodies riddled with shot lay everywhere. In three hours the lower part of the town was all in ruins, and not a soul was stirring. The moans of the wounded, the crash of falling timbers, the whistle of shot and shriek of shell about the heads. The land batteries, toward which the fire of the Blanco had been mainly directed, were completely dismantled, and not a gun could be fired. The batteries on the hills kept up a constant but not very effective fire. About 2 p. m. the two cruisers moved in more toward the town, and began shelling the heights. Then there was a rush for the mountains.

Nothing but Ruins and Corpses.
Like a horde of wild steers that were stampeded the people ran. Mothers struggled with men and fought like tigers. Children and babes were smothered or crushed to death in the mad rush, and all the time the pitiless guns were sending their shower of grape. At times twenty or thirty people would go down at a single volley. Some would rise and keep on running with blood streaming from their wounds and finally sink to the ground exhausted from the loss of blood only to be torn and mangled by the constant hail of grape shot. When the fire from the cruisers ceased about 4 p. m. two-thirds of the town was destroyed and nothing remained of Pisagua but a mass of ruins. From the ruins of one building seventy-two bodies were taken out. The number of dead has as yet not been ascertained positively, but it is believed to be about 2,000.

PARNELL RUNS FROM REPORTERS.
He Makes an Appointment Which He Takes Care Not to Keep.
LONDON, March 16.—Parnell cut a most undignified figure Saturday in his determined efforts to avoid the newspaper men who desired to interview him in regard to Healy's allegations that he was spending his time in private enjoyment while matters of vital importance to Ireland were being discussed and acted upon in the house of commons. Parnell was known to be in the library of the house, and at least thirty reporters sent in their cards during the evening, without being vouchsafed a reply; but finally their persistence was rewarded by a promise that Parnell would see them at a particular spot at a certain time.

Instead He Cut and Run.
While the attention of the reporters was thus diverted for the time being, Parnell summoned an attendant to his aid, and was guided to the ladies' staircase, where he eluded the would-be interviewers watching for him inside and outside the building, and escaped to the street. It was raining heavily and Parnell was obliged to run quite a distance through the storm to catch a cab. He got a good wetting, but succeeded in not facing the reporters. The press generally expressed disgust at Parnell's secret tactics and thinly disguised mysteriousness.

Disclaimed by the Leader.
While at Galway Parnell was asked about the above and said that it was totally false. He also took occasion to deny that he had been at Brighton with Mrs. O'Shea last week while Irish questions were up in the house, or at any other time. He was absent from the house when the debate on the Irish relief fund was "on" but it was a matter that did not need his voice or labor. McCarthy took no part in the debate, and Sexton, Healy and all Parnell's chief opponents were likewise absent from the house on the night in question.

Parnell Speaks in Galway.
Parnell had an enthusiastic reception in Galway yesterday. To prevent him from being saluted by a band which had made all preparations to receive him with blare of trumpets and bent of drum, the McCarthyites broke into the band room at Cloncy and stole the instruments. In his speech Parnell said that Ireland was in much the same position as in 1880, when the unreasonable element in the party opposed him because he supported the government railway measures. He believed in getting all the money he could for Ireland and acted on the belief. Parnell severely criticised the ecclesiastical authorities for their attempt to take the direction of Irish affairs out of the hands of the people, and he denounced what he called Gladstone's effort to dictate to Ireland.

Death of Dr. Windthorst.
BERLIN, March 16.—Dr. Ludwig Windthorst, the parliamentary leader of the Roman Catholic party in Prussia, who has been dangerously ill for some days past, died at 8:15 o'clock Saturday morning. He was born Jan. 17, 1812. Dr. Windthorst at midnight was merely able to whisper replies to inquiries as to his condition. Suddenly, however, his voice returned, and evidently imagining that he was in the reichstag, Dr. Windthorst delivered an impassioned address in favor of the abolition of the law expelling the Jesuits from Germany. The veteran leader's voice while he delivered this address could be clearly heard through three rooms. He never spoke after having concluded his remarks upon that bill.

THE GIRL VICTIM FATALLY BURNED

A Miscreant Enters a Michigan Home, Outrages the Eldest Girl, and Sets Fire to the House, in Which Were Two Other Children, to Conceal the Deceitful—Fierce and Terrible Fatal Fight in Georgia—Dying Desperation—A Hanging in Illinois.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich., March 16.—The small station of Wise, eleven miles north of here, was the scene of a terrible crime and a futile attempt to hide it Saturday morning. Dennis Burns, a laboring man, occupies a small cottage on the border of the village with his wife and three children, the eldest of which was a girl of eight years. Burns left home early in the morning, and Mrs. Burns, needing a pail of water, went for it to a neighbor's well, leaving the children in bed. She stood chatting at the well with a neighbor until her attention was called to her house by smoke pouring from the door.

An Atrocious Crime Committed.
 She rushed home, her steps accelerated by the screams of the children and the bursting of flames from the first-story windows. Without stopping to count the risk she dashed into the flame-filled house and seized the two youngest children from the crib, and, hastily quenching the flames, attempted to get the elder one out. Help arrived and the eldest one was dragged out, but she was badly burned, but she lived long enough to tell her mother that a big man had entered the house and, after feloniously assaulting her, had set fire to the bed-clothing with matches and run out the back door.

Diabolism Almost Unparalleled.
 The second child corroborated the elder, and the doctor's examination proved it beyond a doubt. The fiend had evidently calculated to cremate the three children, and thus destroy all traces of his crime, as it would have been natural to suppose that the children set themselves on fire. There is absolutely no clew to the miscreant, as the children, one and the other, cannot give a good description of him. The sheriff of Isabella county is searching for clues, and there will be a lynching party if he is caught.

AN ILLINOIS MURDERER HANGED.

Crawford, Who Killed Mrs. Matthias, Swings at Decatur.
 DECATUR, Ills., March 16.—W. H. Crawford Jr., was hanged here Saturday at 11:15 a. m. The drop was five feet and his neck was broken by the fall, death being instantaneous. The wound inflicted by himself in his throat tore open. Crawford walked to the gallows with a wonderful show of indifference, and as the rope was placed around his neck he drew himself up to his full height. He declined to make a statement and refused to be baptized, dying unrepentant and defiant.

He Well Deserved His Fate.
 The crime for which Crawford was hanged was the murder of Mrs. Lina Matthias on Aug. 31, 1890. He induced her in some way to accompany him to a lonely field and there cut her throat. Crawford was arrested on suspicion, and after making an attempt to kill himself, confessed that he had killed Mrs. Matthias, saying that he loved her. He expressed a willingness to die for his crime.

MURDEROUS FIGHT IN GEORGIA.

A Dying Participant Kills His Slayer.
 AUGUSTA, Ga., March 16.—Three men lost their lives in a bloody quarrel near Moxey Thursday evening. Harvey Smith, a young planter, had among his employees a negro named Boyd Hutton, whom he had discharged. While Hutton was preparing to leave Thursday night, Smith went down to his cabin to settle with him. Hutton met his approach with a discharge from a shot gun. Smith drew a revolver and shot Hutton in the shoulder. The appearance of Bill Hutton to help his brother made it too one. The next shot from Smith struck Bill in the heart, and the next after that struck Boyd in the abdomen. Smith then fell in a swoon from his own wounds. Boyd Hutton crawled over to where Smith lay, took his revolver, and killed him. He died soon after from his own wounds.

Wanted His Best Suit of Clothes.
 MACOMB, Ill., March 16.—Rev. Ross Dyer, a Baptist evangelist of western Illinois, left this city Thursday morning with Mrs. J. L. Dive. The preacher is but 28, and leaves a wife and three children in Quincy, while Mrs. Dive is a well-preserved matron of 46, with a husband and one child. The parties all came here from Camp Point recently. Mr. Dyer overtook his wife and the preacher at Bushnell, but moved by her tears and entreaties took only her valise which contained his Sunday suit of clothes.

Parnell's Delegates Arrive.
 NEW YORK, March 16.—The delegates sent to this country by Parnell for the purpose of raising funds for the Nationalist movement arrived on the Etruria yesterday morning. The delegation is composed of James J. O'Kelly, M. P.; John O'Connor, M. P.; H. K. Redmond, M. P.; and Henry Harrison, M. P. They were met down the bay by a reception committee, and presented with an address, and later taken to the Hoffman house.

Digging Holes and Living High.
 There's a man at the Auditorium who two days ago paid gold for an $8 a day room, and today is digging post holes on the lake front for the World's fair buildings. His appearance, if not eccentric, at least attracts a vast amount of attention around the caravansary on Michigan avenue. He is tall and spare, wears his hair and beard long, and his blue jeans tucked inside of his coarse rawhide boots. He is nothing if not independent, and walks around the rotunda as if he owned the block. He walked into the dining room on the first floor, and sat down for his breakfast, but a waiter was instructed to ask him to step into the cafe. With smiling face he complied, and ordered a pot of coffee, which was served only after he had deposited twenty-five cents with the cashier. In reply to the question if he thought dining at the Auditorium and digging post holes was good policy he said:

"Well, I have lived here before, and why can't I do so now?"

His story is somewhat disconnected, and he gives evidence of being mildly insane. He claims that his name is Will Graham, and that he owns a house and lot on the north side worth $2,000, and that he has just come from Colorado, where he has been for some time. Yesterday morning, after drinking his coffee, he took a five cent piece that he had been holding in his mouth and left it on the table. As he went out of the door he turned and said to the bartenders, waiters and cashiers: "Say, you fellows, there's a tip you can wrangle for among you. Good day."

As Bayard Taylor Did.

The Schliemann method of acquiring a language is well worth mentioning. It consisted simply in reading a great deal aloud without making a translation, taking a lesson every day under the constant supervision of a teacher, learning this by heart and repeating in the next lesson what was corrected on the previous day. It was his habit to learn at least two languages a year. The Russian he studied without a teacher, because none were to be had, while he lived in Amsterdam, and he paid a Jew four francs a week to hear his compositions in Russian, although the fellow did not understand one word.

The doctor was housed on the third floor, but as the ceilings were made of wood his recitations were plainly to be heard on the first floor, and his fellow lodgers were so annoyed by the racket that they caused him to be turned out of the house. As is well known, he was obliged to give up his grocer's apprenticeship on account of having ruptured a blood vessel in lifting a hoghead. The perfect muscular development and fine health with which he was afterward favored he attributed to the exercise of his lungs by constantly reading aloud.—Indianapolis News.

An Intelligent Florida Mule.
 Jupiter can boast of the most intelligent mule on record. His muleship is free, white (gray) and 21 years old. Every night this much admired animal proceeds to the life saving station. It is customary for the man on watch to discharge his coston signal (a red light) when vessels come too near the beach. Now his muleship has "caught on" to what this signal means. So every night at 8 o'clock the sailor's four legged friend proceeds to walk the beach, and if a vessel comes too near the shore his muleship assumes the attitude of a stubborn bull, when trying to be led by the horns, but, instead of a coston signal, he sends forth a neigh that makes night hideous. "Port or starboard your helm" is the order on the ship, and away sail the jolly tars in perfect safety, and with a grateful heart to the four legged patrolman.—Florida Times-Union.

A Good Horse Story.
 During the Belgian maneuvers a regiment of lancers was to attack a village and drive two companies of hussars away from it, then pursue them to the next town. A number of high military officers witnessed these maneuvers, among them an Austrian colonel. As one of the hussars passed him the galloping horse suddenly halted and squared up to the colonel's horse, nor could the rider stir him a foot. Quickly deciding, the hussar addressed the colonel: "Comrade, help me fly! My horse won't stir without yours." The colonel laughed, and put his horse on a run with him, and thus both riders reached the town before the pursuing lancers could capture them. All in maneuver.—Exchange.

Sawdust Bricks.
 The Technical Royal School at Charlottenburg has been making a series of experiments with sawdust, and has now proved that it can be used as building material. The sawdust is mixed with certain refuse mineral products, and compressed with a pressure of 1,500,000 kilograms to the quadrimeter in the form of bricks, and after this treatment the sawdust forms excellent building material, very light, impervious to wet and utterly unflammable. A slab of this substance was placed for five hours in a coal fire, and came out of the test intact.—New York Telegram.

He Found It.

There is a story about almost every inland lake that it has no bottom. John Farmer, a New York man, has spent three months sounding the lakes of that state, and in no case has he found a spot in any lake deeper than ninety-one feet. That's water enough, however, to drown all the surplus cats and dogs.—Detroit Free Press.

WOMAN'S REAL PLACE.

A CONTRAST BETWEEN THE SHOP GIRL AND THE SERVANT.

The Former Tries to Keep Body and Soul Together with Scarcely More Money Than the Latter Gets as Pocket Money. The Cause of the Evil.

The kitchen and nursery versus the factory and store question has long engaged the attention of women who are devoting their lives to the improvement of the material condition of their sisters. In other words, those philanthropic persons are wondering whether, after all, the working woman has done a wise thing by leaving the sphere which was peculiarly her own, with different surroundings, since the days of Adam, and invading the occupations which are, by their nature, adapted to men.

Some opinions on this subject have recently been given. They came from women who thoroughly understand the existing conditions of life, and their expressions were echoes which are heard everywhere nowadays. The best friends, male and female, of the working women are asking the same question—Why do women put themselves under circumstances where they may be led to starvation or shame when they can readily avoid both by remaining within their natural sphere?

The answer given by a leader of the working women is the only one that covers the question in many cases. It is the "lady craze." The "saleslady" and the "factory lady" have an ambition to eclipse the wives and daughters of their employers in the matter of dress, and they see nothing absurd in carrying out their purpose. And the community seems to agree with them.

WAGES IN TWO LINES OF WORK.

Careful observers say that in this matter the girls act just the same as the young men of the day who crowd one another for clericalships, etc., whose pay is $4 or $5 a week, rather than learn a trade in which they can earn three or four times that much. The puny little clerk and the pale, unhealthy "saleslady" think they are gentlemen and ladies and would be horrified if any one offered to introduce them to the rosy, healthy servant girl who has an account at the bank, or to the robust mechanic who can produce a larger roll of bills on Saturday evening.

The "lady" who sells handkerchiefs and toilet boxes during the day for an income of fifty cents is the other half of the "gentleman" who sells cuffs and collars for sixty or seventy cents a day. They are the natural product of the new American lady and gentleman craze, and they never realize just what it means unless they get married. Then the "gentleman" clerk wishes he had mated with a girl in domestic service who knew how to cook and who had a little money laid by; and the "lady" regrets that she did not devote her smiles to a mechanic who could support her. The police courts and the divorce courts give the culmination of these stories every day in the year.

But the purpose of this article is to give further particulars that enter into the contrast between the women in domestic service and those who have flooded men's occupations. According to the most accurate statistics obtainable, the wages of servants in this city average, at the lowest estimate, $15 a month, besides board, lodging and in many cases all the clothing needed. Perhaps $3.50 a week might be fixed as the average money compensation of all the women in domestic service.

Now, according to the statement of Miss Ida Van Ethen, Mrs. Cragh and Miss Foster, the average wages of working women in stores and factories is, at the highest estimate, $4 a week.

A COMPARISON.
 That is a half dollar difference in wages, and that half dollar represents, in a comparison, the board, lodging, etc., of the servants. Of course, no woman can live on fifty cents a week. It takes her whole $4 to pay for board and lodgings if she gives anything like proper nourishment to her body. So it amounts to just this: At the end of a week the servant has $3.50 to lay by, while the "saleslady" has not a penny.

As to lodging, the average servant has her own little room, nicely furnished and heated in winter. The "saleslady," if she boards, has a cold room at the top of the house, shared by three or four other unfortunate. The latter works on an average of ten hours a day, while in the holiday season she works as much as sixteen hours, and never does a penny of extra pay reach her pocket.

The servant has no longer hours, and she can rest during a great part of them, and, besides, has her two or three "evenings off" during the week. Her work, on the whole, is much lighter, and she does not know what fines are. If she falls ill, in a good family, she receives the same cordial attention that her mistress would, and is surrounded by kind attentions. And her wages go on all the time.

But how about the "saleslady" up in the top of the boarding house if she should get sick? Well, unless she is absolutely at the point of death she is packed off to a hospital when the time for which she has paid her board has expired. But even if she is allowed to remain there till she gets well, she resumes her work with her trunk under bondage to the landlady, and with a, to her, heavy debt staring her in the face. Is it any wonder that many a naturally good girl seeks escape from such troubles in the concert halls?

And is it any wonder that the comfortable servant girl generally ends her career of working for others by marrying an honest man and settling down in a comfortable home.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Only A Cold.

It is only a cold you say and you think you will soon get over it. And yet in the train of a cold lies a long list of diseases. It begins with a slight sensation of uneasiness in the head, but it ends in a cough that breeds lung trouble and runs into consumption, and then death. The way to fight this foe is never to let him enter the citadel. As soon as you feel that you have taken cold take a dose of that most excellent remedy, REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE. There is nothing else on the market that is so certain in its effects, that acts so quickly as does this, that is free from all deleterious influences. In all these respects it is a marvel. No one can take a single dose without feeling its beneficial effects. It ranges over the whole field of pulmonary complaints. It is a specific for coughs. It has cured many cases of asthma that had defied all other efforts. It is a certain remedy for pneumonia, while for catarrh it has proved itself the best thing that has ever been presented to the American people. For sale by all druggists 25 and 50 cents.

Gone mad—
 the person with bad blood who's not taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. You are bereft of judgment and good sense if you allow your blood to get out of order, your liver sluggish—life dull, everything blue, for you may soon find out that you're in the grave—or next to it—because you did not procure the G. M. D. soon enough, and some dread disease, may be influenza or consumption, may be typhoid or malarial fever, has taken you. Consumption is Lung Scrofula. For Scrofula in its myriad forms, and for all Liver, Blood and Lung diseases, the "Discovery" is an unequalled remedy. Everybody, now and then, feels "run-down" "played-out,"—with no power, to generate vitality, in fact, just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of medicine comes in, and the "Discovery" does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten.

We claim that nothing like it has been discovered for a blood-purifier. It's guaranteed by the makers. Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

UNCLE DEMPSEY'S DREAM.

Through the Good Nature of Some College Students It Comes True.

On the waters of Buzzard's bay plies busily from one fishing ground to another a little boat which has a peculiar history.

Several years ago an old negro went to the shores of this bay to make a living for himself and his wife. They were very poor, but their cabin was clean and Uncle Dempsey was the most honest and jolly of fishermen, with all the kindly courtesy of his race.

He knew every foot of the shore, could tell by certain mysterious signs known only to himself just when the bluefish would go out or the squeteagues come in, and could guide the boats directly to the ledges where the rock bass had hidden.

The boatmen who took out parties of amateur fishermen always secured Dempsey as a helper when they could get him, in order to use his marvelous skill. They paid him but a trifle for his services.

The old couple did not grow rich. Indeed, they had a hard struggle to live. One summer Dempsey was hired at a low rate by a boatman, who took out almost every day the same party, a half dozen young men from Harvard on their vacation.

The young fellows became fond of the patient, kindly old man to whom they owed the success of their fishing. One day they said to him, "What do you want in this world, Dempsey?"

His eyes twinkled.

"A boat, sah," he said promptly. "A big boat. Hold twenty men. I dreamed 'bout flat boat las' night. I dreamed I come out in my cabin, 'n' dah it was in de cove, anchored. Dat boat 'd cost two hundred dollahs, sah! 'Fit foh de king to go fishin' in. Painted white, wid a blue stripe 'n' a white 'n' blue flag, 'n' a cabin all complete. Ef dat boat had been real Uncle Dempsey 'd been rich foh de rest ob his life."

The young men laughed and left Dempsey in his cabin. Then one of them said:

"We have plenty of money to waste on our own amusement. We can afford to do this thing. We owe much to the old man, and this boat will give him a livelihood for the rest of his days. What do you say, Dempsey?"

The result was that one of them ran down by train to New Bedford that afternoon. It was easy to find a boat answering the description which the old man had given, and to order her to be painted white and blue.

A week later the old negro was roused at daylight by a tremendous pounding on his door. He came out. No human being was in sight; but on the bay, anchored just in front of his cabin, was a big boat, painted white and blue, and on the stern in gilt letters the name Dempsey's Dream.

She still floats, a pleasant reminder of the kindly good will that gave and the honest service that earned her.—Chicago Mail.

Men Are Still at It.

More than a century ago the Academie Royale des Sciences at Paris passed a resolution that they would no longer entertain communications about discoveries of perpetual motion. They included in the same prohibition the duplication of the cube, the trisection of the angle and the quadrature of the circle. Men had worked for centuries on the theory that the discovery of perpetual motion was possible, nor did this authoritative opinion to the contrary alter their views. And they are still working at it, and probably will to the end of time. Hundreds of patents have been granted for machines for the purpose, and the widespread and continued existence of the fallacy is clearly shown by the scores of designs and incomplete models in the patent office at Washington.—Chicago Herald.

She Was Funny, Too.

"Really," she said, after a mutual friend had introduced them, "you must call on me, Mr. Duode. I shall be very pleased to see you."

"But my experience in calling has not been a very pleasant one," he said, trying to be funny, "for what with irate fathers, listening brothers, athletic dogs and inquisitive mothers, I am nearly worn out."

"Then I know you won't object to call on me," she said sweetly, "for we never had a dog; father was shot while stealing chickens; mother is paralyzed and cannot speak a word, and my brother is serving a life term in Auburn. I know you'll come."

But he didn't. He went around asking his friends if the girl was crazy.—New York Evening Sun.

A Queer Sepulcher.

Robert Buchanan, of Monroe county, Ia., while digging a coal shaft on his farm, east of Albia, found a new species of mouse imbedded in the clay thirty feet below the surface. It was found in a little cavity just large enough to fit the body, but without any clay adhering to its fur. The sides of the cavity seemed worn and polished, as if the little creature had turned around and around thousands of times in its narrow sepulcher before it finally died. When found it was in a perfect state of preservation, and as soft and pliable as if it had only died the day before.—St. Louis Republic.

Eternal Vigilance Is the Price.

Penelope—Don't go away, Jack. They'll take us for wall flowers.

Jack—Aw, naw! I never converse with ladies unless another man is around. I'd be engaged in a week if I did.—Munsey's Weekly.

WHO BUY THE FINE COMBS.

What an Inquiry at the Leading Stores Revealed to a Reporter.

"Are fine combs as much bought as ever?" was the rather startling question addressed to the head of one of the best known dry goods stores in the city. The questioner looked serious, then a broad smile of amusement spread over his ample countenance and he answered slowly:

"Well, they are not falling into disuse by any means. We sell as many as a hundred a week."

"I suppose the trade is confined to a certain class of people, is it not?" ventured the scribe.

"No, indeed, that's where people make a mistake; all school girl outfits contain a fine comb, and it is the same with boys when they are sent to boarding schools. So we have quite a trade with mothers who pack up this 'unmentionable' with jams and cakes of every description. One would be astonished to see an elegant looking woman in velvet and furs walk up to this counter, buy four or five bottles of the most expensive perfume, and finish by adding to her purchases an ivory fine tooth comb; but such is the case. Don't look down on that article of toilet. Some of our very best customers buy them, as well as the frowsy gentry who come Saturday nights for Sunday dress up effects, such as ribbons and cravats and clean collars."

"Well," began the head and proprietor of an up town store where more business is done in half a day than some more pretentious stores do in a week of Mondays, "we keep on selling our fine combs at a pretty brisk rate. We sell a good many to some of our nicest customers. Some people think combing the hair with a stiff, fine comb gives life to the hair and invigorates the scalp. That is most likely why the sale in that line does not decrease. But it is a mistake. Fine combs create dandruff. Let people wash their heads well and there will be no use for them at all."

Notwithstanding this, some of the fine combs are quite high priced articles, some being real tortoise-shell, and some of the daintiest and most expensive toilet sets contain a thin little fine comb, with as many sharp teeth as Argus had eyes. The best are of ivory, and cost from $1 to $1.75. The tortoise shell combs cannot be cut in this fine tooth without breaking, so, necessarily, they are coarser and less desirable.

But there is one thing good to remember, the most complete toilet sets have them.—New York World.

A Movable Hitching Post.

Many curious things have been done by absent minded or thoughtless persons since the world began, but it was only recently that a man hitched his horse to a train of freight cars which had stopped momentarily during the process known as "making up trains." The author of this new idea of hitching had gone to East Buffalo to draw a load of tow. Arrived, he looked for a hitching post or a stationary object of some kind which would answer the purpose, but seeing none noticed the motionless freight cars near by, and without further ado tied his rig thereto.

He had gone but a short distance when the cars started up and took the rig along with them. Their speed was not great, however, and after a little stroll with the train the horse was loosened and taken back to its driver.—Buffalo Express.

The Blackbird Days.

Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1 are famous in the neighborhood of Brescia, Constantino, Florence, Italy, and along the Danube and the Rhine, as the "Blackbird days." A curious medieval legend says that originally all species of the grackles (blackbirds) were of a creamy white color; that it became black because during one year in the Middle Ages the three days above mentioned were so cold that all birds in central and southern Europe took refuge in the chimneys. At Brescia, Mr. Swainson says, the three days are celebrated with a feast called "I giorni della meria," meaning the feast of the transformation of the bird.—St. Louis Republic.

A Strange Experience.

Merchant—Anything remarkable happen on your last trip?

Drummer—Remarkable! One of the most phenomenal occurrences ever heard of gave me such a start that I haven't got over it yet. It was on the night express east.

"Well! Well! What was it?"

"The train suddenly stopped, and when the passengers began asking the conductor what was the matter he didn't rush away, nor hew nor haw, nor anything. He just stood still and told them.—Good News.

Ivory Made from Milk.

A process for the production of a new material called lactite, or milk ivory, has been invented, skim milk being the substance from which it is made. It is stated that the invention has been put into practical working shape, and a factory is to start operations in Ireland. Lactite bears a close resemblance to real ivory, but can be made in black or any color desired. Its special adaptation is for electrical fittings, buttons, door knobs, etc.—Boston Transcript.

The following advertisement, published by a prominent western patent medicine house would indicate that they regard disease as a punishment for sin:

"Do you wish to know the quickest way to cure a severe cold? We will tell you. To cure a cold quickly, it must be treated before the cold has settled in the system. This can always be done if you choose to, as nature in her kindness to man gives timely warning and plainly tells you in nature's way, that as a punishment for some indiscretion, you are to be afflicted unless you choose to ward it off by prompt action. The first symptoms of a cold, in most cases, is a dry, loud cough and sneezing. The cough is soon followed by a profuse watery expectoration and the sneezing by a profuse watery discharge from the nose. In severe cases there is a thin white coating on the tongue. What to do? It is only necessary to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in double doses every hour. That will greatly lessen the severity of the cold and in most cases will effectually counteract it, and cure what would have been a severe cold within one or two days time. Try it and be convinced." 50 cent bottles for sale by H. E. Donaldson, Druggist.
